How would I go about it? A: The single expected-argument :foo is checked before the multimethod takes over (not during the check). That means that if there is only one argument (:foo), it means the multimethod is not being checked, and so it can do anything. The [& args] in your multimethod is a no-op, and so it doesn't do anything. You either need to pass a single argument (:foo) to the :foo form in the multimethod, or you need to surround the check with a conditional with another form inside the multimethod. For example: (defmulti multi-coll-case (fn [coll & args] (if (:foo coll) 'foo
